

I believe that the FCC should allow each state to set it's own telephone privacy act. Before the current Indiana law came into effect, we received 5 to 10 calls a night from telemarketers. Since the law passed, I do not receive any calls from telemarketers. I do not want agencies of the federal government weakening the laws that Indiana has passed protecting our privacy from telemarketers. Please leave the laws regulating telemarketers in the hands of state governments.
